

Please accept this letter of praise for Jasmine Poole. I've known Jasmine for well over a decade and she never ceases to impress and amaze me. Her work in the creative fields of media and music production have given her experience in sound recording, video production, project management, storytelling, scheduling, and more. It's the soft skills though, that make Jasmine someone you want in your corner. She's open-minded, adaptable, empathetic, loves working with a team, and just brings enthusiasm and joy to those she encounters.

I've know Jasmine as a student, as a colleague, a fellow artist, and a friend. She has an uncanny ability to bring divergent people together to create good things, isn't afraid to take chances and do something that goes against the grain, and is respectful of others and their talents (something I sadly don't always see in gifted artists). Jasmine also has this crazy ability to stay positive in the face of adversity. She hasn't always had the easiest of roads to travel in life, but she has always maintained a hopefulness and confidence for a successful outcome. That is not an easy quality to come by, and one that any team working to do something new and innovative is going to need.

Do yourself a favor and get Jasmine on board. I think she'd make an excellent addition to your team.

Sincerely,

Sara L. Drabik
Professor, Media and Journalism Program Head, Northern Kentucky University
Vice President, Women in Film Cincinnati
drabiks1@nku.edu